[CHANGE OF PACE
LEVEL 2 PHASE 4](#)

This level 2 change of pace is already an elite movement. If you're struggling with it, make sure to go back to level 1 and master the basics first.

This move helps you control your speed and throw off your defender's timing

DOWNHILL AND TRANSITION LEVEL 1

[DOWNHILL &
TRANSITION LEVEL 1
PHASE 1-5](#)

This downhill action in transition gives you multiple options as you attack. It helps you read the defender and react properly to whatever the defense gives you.

In & out, cross, between, behind - we use this combo in our Change of direction level 3 because we want you to adapt to multiple combinations and shift directions quickly. We also focus on curving as you change direction.

Snatch back- There's a big difference between a snatch back and a speed stop into behind the back move. With the snatch back, your body is usually in a diagonal position and not ready to shoot right away. The purpose is to change the angle of your defender and shift your body position and create a new line of attack.

In and out into push cross- This move helps you manipulate your defender and shift them to one side. From there, you can quickly change direction and create a better angle for your attack.

Here's an alternative movement for our Change of direction Level 3 if you're not using a rim and just want to get quality reps in. This is perfect for tight spaces while still working on your footwork, control, and quick direction changes.
